

About this site

Hi there! I created this site to challenge myself with a new project. You can view it as a medium for me to display myself to you apart from the traditional medias of e.g. Instagram and Linkedln.

About Me

My name is Mads Damgaard, I'm currently 21 years old living in Copenhagen, Denmark. I recently decided that I want to pursue a bachelors degree in Software Development at ITU, starting from september 2024. Until then I will be spending April and May studying math from 8:30 to 11:30 at Niels Brock.

When I was 19, I moved to Barcelona, Spain. Post my high school graduation (HHX), I took opportunity to take an internship abroad (PIU), where I got a two year education as a commercial assistant with sales, within one year instead. Barcelona thought me a ton of stuff about myself, culture and how to navigate uncertain situations. Being in a foreign country, where you don't speak the language, while working for a hectic pre-product market fit startup builds gut!

I have a ton of interesting stories, if you want to hear more, feel free to fill out the contact form below or give me a shout on Linkedln.

Books I read

I try reading a lot of books, both for personal development and to learn new things. My general philosophy is that, it is better to read one good book multiple times and live it's principles, rather than read 10 books that all fade out. So I decided to dedicate a page on my site to give you an insight into the books I'm reading, view them here.

Some of my Projects

Dragons den Game

I followed freeCodeCamps' JavaScript tutorial on how to develop a role playing game, learning how to work with arrays, strings, objects, functions, loops, if/else statements, and more.

Netflix meets Tinder

I spent some time exploring a service called 'Flutterflow,' a no-code app development tool and created a Tinder-like application for movies.

Kombucha

During Covid, I had a little too much time on hand and decided to started culturing my own Kombucha. An interesting project, I've learned is not common among 19-year olds.
